Preserving and Sharing the World’s Records: We Can Help!

Presentation by Carol Kostakos Petranek

Major genealogy companies have initiatives to digitize local records from many corners of the world. Carol volunteers in an initiative to make records from Sparta, Greece, home of her ancestors, eventually available online. Hear about her experiences and how we can become involved in a project to help share a “niche” region’s records. She’ll show examples of the records that are being preserved and discuss upcoming projects.

Carol Kostakos Petranek serves as an Assistant Director of the Washington, D.C. Family History Center. She is a volunteer at the National Archives, teaches at local and national conferences and is an active member of many genealogy initiatives and projects.
